PRAISES 'A CONVERSATION WITH ANDREW D. BASIAGO'

SEATTLE, WA (MARS) September 9, 2009 – Edward Long of Information Farm on the World Wide Web is acclaiming “A Conversation with Andrew D. Basiago,” the six-hour interview of Andy posted by Jessica Mystic on YouTube.

In the 39-part interview, Andy relates his experiences in DARPA’s Project Pegasus as one of America’s early time-space explorers during the period 1969-72 and narrates the seven episodes over 40 years in which the CIA, in possession of a “quantum access” capability since 1967-68, briefed Andy about his destiny as a public figure to one day be principally associated with the discovery of life on Mars.

The interview of Andy by Jessica Mystic is a work of “deep exopolitics” that tells how the emergence of time travel technology and the discovery of life on Mars were interlinked. In the interview, Andy describes several of the Mars-related linkages between his childhood experiences in the US time-space program and the Planet Mars, including meeting three Martian astronauts at the Curtiss-Wright Aeronautical Facility in Wood Ridge, NJ in 1970, being asked to read and remember his 2008 paper The Discovery of Life on Mars in 1971, and two trips that he took to Mars via teleportation from a CIA facility in El Segundo, CA in 1981.

According to Andy, the US government has had a fully operational teleportation capability since 1967-68, and by 1969-70, was already training a cadre of gifted and talented American schoolchildren, including himself, to become America’s first generation of “chrononauts.”

His experiences in Project Pegasus culminated in 1981, when, at age 19, he teleported to Mars.

In these dispatches to Jessica and Andy, Ed addresses Andy’s experiences in New Mexico while secretly serving in DARPA’s Project Pegasus as a child in the early 1970s.

Ed to Jessica: Hello, Jessica. I am 62 and live in Eleele, HI on the island of Kauai. I have researched the true history of humanity and extraterrestrials for several years.

I want to congratulate you on your stirring and important interview with Andrew D. Basiago. I listened to this interview all day yesterday. I say all day because I stopped and researched many of the things that Andy was saying.

I lived in Santa Fe and Albuquerque and even worked for the legislature in the state capitol building in Santa Fe for the speaker of the house of New Mexico. I have several friends who worked for Los Alamos Labs, and at one time, I lived near the Sandia Labs in Albuquerque.

I phoned friends of mine in New Mexico to let them know about the interview and let them check out some of the things that Andy related.

One of my friends eats regularly at the La Hacienda and La Placita restaurants where Connie Chavez worked and where Andy mentions meeting Rumsfeld and the Bushes when he was attached to Project Pegasus as one of the children serving on the project. I was particularly interested in Connie Chavez and her relationship to Project Pegasus and will e-mail Andy to see if he can provide more information.

I'm also familiar with the old school site in Lamy, NM outside Santa Fe that Andy mentioned as the place where the children were medically examined and cognitively tested after teleporting to Santa Fe in 1970 and the Cerrillos Cultural Center where the stargate was located where they jumped to 2045 to recover data there.

I checked out such data points that Andy mentioned as: tachistoscopes; chronovision; Courtney Brown, who was involved in the remote viewing of Mars at Emory University; and Harold M. Agnew, who was involved in weapons development at the Los Alamos National Labs and who Andy has identified as the federal science administrator of Project Pegasus...

I think that Andy is the bravest of the brave and it's evident that, as he told you, he is not afraid to die to get this information out.

I very much appreciate the way you let him tell his story in his own way for such a long period of time. All the cells in my body are still tingling from the excitement I felt from the interview.

I hope that you will continue to follow your intuition and this will lead to more revealing interviews in the future.

Ed to Andy: It took me all day to complete the six hours of interview with Jessica Schab because I stopped constantly to investigate and understand what you were describing...

The cells in my body were tingling with excitement listening to your story and I appreciate your bravery and the sharing of your experiences with those of us who have been kept in the dark for so long.

When you teleported to the state capitol complex in Santa Fe, do you mean the legislative building? Exactly where in the complex did you arrive?

My Santa Fe friends and I got a big chuckle out of the vision of a young Bill Richardson taking roll of the teleporteers after arriving in Santa Fe.

Andy to Ed: When we teleported to Santa Fe, all of Santa Fe is where we could and did end up. In those days, they were still struggling with their ability to put teleporteers down exactly where they wanted to have them arrive.

Usually, we would pop into view where they intended, that is, the grounds immediately surrounding the Bataan Memorial Building, the pre-1966 state capitol before the present state capitol building, the Roundhouse, was built.

The wooden frame of the bell tower atop the Bataan Memorial Building was the visual hallmark that we were told to look for after popping into view somewhere in Santa Fe.

The specific place that we were told to gather after popping into view in Santa Fe was an ochre-colored retaining wall beneath the bell tower of the Bataan Memorial Building.

Oddly, the entrance to that side of the building, where there is an intaglio of the New Mexico State seal on the floor, has been permanently shut, as if to erase the physical environment of the place that we were teleporting to during the early days of US time-space research.

One time, I popped into view down near I-25 and Cerrillos Road and had to walk all the way up Cerrillos Road to the state capitol complex.

During my three major fact-finding trips to New Mexico in 2003, 2004 and 2008, I found people who had heard direct eyewitness accounts of children suddenly appearing in the state capitol complex in Santa Fe in the early 1970s.

I am certain that when my book about my adventures in Project Pegasus is published, yet more people will come forward with eyewitness accounts confirming my allegation that Santa Fe, NM was the Kitty Hawk of teleportation.

Downtown Sante Fe, NM with bell tower of the Bataan Memorial Building in its skyline. It was here that the world's first teleporteers arrived in the early 1970s during the early years of time-space exploration by the United States. By 1981, they were teleporting to Mars.
