

LOS ANGELES TIMES REINFORCES HOAGLAND-VAN FLANDERN FALLACY

SEATTLE, WA (MARS) February 21, 2010 – The Hoagland-van Flandern Fallacy states that Mars is the site of artifacts that provide evidence of ancient life on Mars but not of biological life forms that reveal that Mars is presently inhabited. This is the view of Mars that has been advanced by such leading figures in Mars anomaly research as journalist Richard Hoagland and the late astronomer Dr. Tom van Flandern.

Every time that the subject of life on Mars is discussed in the mainstream media, the work of Hoagland is referenced and The Hoagland-van Flandern Fallacy reinforced. This is not accidental. It is official US government policy to conceal the fact that Mars has an ecology and civilization, that the US government has been teleporting individuals to Mars for decades, and that Mars is the location of secret US bases.

Media management of the meme that Mars is only the harbinger of evidence of ancient life was again reinforced in an article published today in the Los Angeles Times. Ostensibly, the article (excerpted below) was about George Noory's pre-eminence in paranormal radio. The article, however, also reinforced The Hoagland-van Flandern Fallacy that there are ancient ruins but not life forms on Mars.

Highlighted in yellow (below) is the text in the Los Angeles Times article that emphasizes that the Moon and Mars are the site of ancient artifacts but makes no mention of the evidence that Mars is inhabited. Of historical note is the fact that MARS has been publishing evidence of life forms on Mars since MARS' president Andrew D. Basiago published his landmark paper The Discovery of Life on Mars in 2008.

America's #1 Late-Night Radio Talk Show Host George Noory Commands an Audience of 3 Million+ Listeners into Talk of the Supernatural and Brings It Back to Earth on His Coast-to-Coast AM Show

Heard Nightly, Guests and Callers can Talk about Virtually Anything – Ghosts, Bigfoot, Roswell, Alien Abductions, Who Killed JFK – and Not be Mocked as They would be in the Mainstream Media

By David Ferrell, Los Angeles Times, Calendar Section, February 21, 2010

WHATEVER CRITICS might say about George Noory, he earns credit for keeping an open mind. In fact, Noory's unmatched success on overnight talk radio may be due to his willingness to think the unthinkable – such as when NASA gadfly Richard C. Hoagland rails about a government cover-up of ancient structures on the Moon, or when a listener calls to report being attacked in bed by a dark, malevolent spirit...

Based partly on feedback from 1,500 e-mails a day, Noory has begun giving more air time to conspiracies, which run the gamut from age-old speculations about who killed John F. Kennedy to Hoagland's claims that NASA is hiding evidence of past civilizations on the Moon and Mars. A contrary theory is that man never went to the Moon at all, because radiation beyond the atmosphere would have fried anyone in a thin space capsule...

Reference

<http://articles.latimes.com/2010/feb/21/entertainment/la-ca-george-noory21-2010feb21>