

MARS REPUBLISHES EMILY CRAGG'S LETTER TO THE NSA

Andrew D. Basiago, president, Mars Anomaly Research Society (MARS): Shortly after I published my paper The Discovery of Life on Mars in 2008, I was contacted by Emily Cragg, a retired digital image technician for Xerox from San Jose, California. She stated that not only Mars but other celestial bodies in our solar system, including the Moon, harbor life. In this letter to the National Security Agency (below), Cragg relates her efforts to reveal that the images produced by NASA show evidence of intentional manipulation by the space agency designed to conceal from the American people and the people of Planet Earth that we inhabit an inhabited solar system. MARS salutes the efforts that Emily Cragg is making to hold NASA accountable for its disinformation and also to have NASA fulfill the mission that it was given in the NASA Act of 1958 to foster "the expansion of human knowledge of... space." Living and future generations deserve nothing less from the government of the greatest nation on Earth.

*****

December 2, 2009

NSA, Gentlemen:

My name is Emily Cragg and in my working life I was a digital image technician for Xerox Corporation from 1973 to 1978. My job was to "correct" the copies of my customers so they would reflect the original documents' pixels.

Since I retired on disability, I became suspicious of NASA's photo process due to absolutely strange photo characteristics they openly publish. For the past two years, I have isolated, and informed NASA of, defects in their photo processing department, relative to resolution, skew, scale, hue and contrast. I have sent NASA literally hundreds of samples of faulty photos; I have called and written their managers. Silence has been the outcome.

The fact is, NASA's photos tell a false story. I am high-lighting and articulating the falseness of NASA's story on Facebook, because Mr. Michael Cabbage, NASA HQ, and Guy Webster, NASA-JPL, tell me I should publicize these errors any which way I can, including putting their reprocessed photos into newspapers, on web-pages, anywhere that will accept same. I have called these NASA managers, time-after-time, and pleaded with them to come to some negotiable agreement about telling the truth in their photos; but the only response I get is microwave bursts in the middle of the night, to silence me in my bed.

When is the US Government going to stop lying to the scientific community and the people? The Moon is not 2,000 miles in diameter; it is not a quarter of a million miles out. Copernicus Crater is the size of a football field, not 92 kilometers, the distance from San Jose to Sacramento.

What rationale is there for absolutely fabricating and confabulating the truth about our Moon and the planets in this solar system? Why can't our children know there are humans all over this solar system? Why are we still pre-Copernican demagogues?

I will not stop telling people the truth that NASA is lying. And you are the guys who own NASA. When are you going to get real?

Emily Cragg, B.S., M.A.