

'QUANTUM' RADIO DEVICE
FOUND ON NASA'S SPIRIT

Kent Bye April 13, 2010 at 4:18 pm

Hey Andrew, I don't know if you have heard about the testimony from an engineer who worked on the Mars rover Spirit that they discovered evidence of a quantum radio device that can instantaneously send thumbnails of the images from Spirit's flash memory to a computer. It seems that a remote DoD-connected computer can preview, alter, or delete the images before they are transmitted back to Earth. I think this might be of interest to you. It's a long and detailed story, and the author is confused as to why the DoD might be collaborating with NASA to censor images coming down from the Spirit. Kent

<http://astroengineer.wordpress.com/2010/04/07/a-curiosity-of-spirit-full-document/>

Andrew D. Basiago April 13, 2010 at 8:36 pm

Kent, Thank you for this lead! You just might have helped identify to my organization MARS the "Deep Throat" of "Marsgate"! All the best, Andy

Kent Bye April 13, 2010 at 10:49 pm

Andy, Awesome! Hopefully, you two can connect somehow. It sounds like he's got a lot more story to tell, and is searching for some answers. And from what I could tell from the hacker point-of-view, it's a very plausible and detailed account of how they discovered this rogue q-bit telecommunications device on the Mars Spirit. Hope all is well... I was captivated by your six-hour interview, and wish you well in whatever book or movie that is going to be made from your story. It's certainly captivating! Kent